

Suzanne A Sorof, MD FACC
Cardiology/Interventional Cardiology
Assistant Professor, Creighton University
St Joseph Heart and Vascular Institute

Dr. Sorof graduated medical school in 1998 from Baylor College of Medicine in Houston Texas and stayed for Residency.

Following residency, she completed a year of CHF research at Baylor and the VA hospital - Houston. She completed her Cardiology fellowship at MetroHealth hospital of Case Western University in Cleveland and was the Chief fellow.

Following her Cardiology training, she entered Interventional Cardiology training at Virginia Commonwealth University/ Medical College of Virginia and stayed as on as faculty there for 1 year following the fellowship prior to moving to Phoenix in 2007.

Dr. Sorof has been in Arizona practicing Cardiology since 2007.

She has been involved in the local chapter of the American Heart Association as the Past President from 2011-2013 and have been on the ACC board of directors from 2009-2019/

Dr. Sorof was in private practice until this year when she joined the faculty of Creighton University to help train medical students, residents, and fellows. Teaching has always been her passion with current interests in Pulmonary hypertension, Cardio- Oncology and Women's health.